Our Mission

Create an environment that supports the diverse membership of IFMA and encourages each member's growth in the areas of facility management most important to them individually.

Programz Corner

Welcome to 2006 and what is going to be an energized and engaging year of local IFMA events!

January's tour of SonoSite in Bothell drew a great crowd. SonoSite, a Bothell based company started in 1999, is now the world leader in portable ultrasound technology. Attendees were given a hands on look at their impressive technology that includes a full color ultrasound about the size of a small laptop. Equally impressive has been the company's growth from $10M in sales in 1999 to over $100M in sales in 2005. A spin off from ATL in Bothell, SonoSite has chosen to keep much of their manufacturing and final assembly here in Bothell to maintain high quality standards and keep the engineering and manufacturing under one roof. Housed in two typical suburban office buildings, SonoSite is a great example of an integrated and sophisticated facility. Challenges for facility management include housing engineering, sales and administrative offices, product testing, electronics assembly, clean rooms, curing ovens, precision machining, product service and even shipping and receiving in open environments that encourage interaction, while still maintaining ISO 9000 registration, FDA requirements, stringent European market hazardous waste and recycling requirements, and high levels of intellectual and physical property security...phew! Thanks to Brian Rush and everyone at SonoSite for their generosity. It's inspiring to see a local success story and the key role facility management plays in that success. Thanks also to Starbuck and Pot O' Gold for providing refreshments.

The Programs Committee is looking forward to the Education Symposium, scheduled for March 2nd at the Lynwood Convention Center. This year's focus is on Trends in Facility Design and Operation. We encourage you to attend this event to learn from industry leaders. Look for a flash email for more information on registration information.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Chris Lewis

Greetings Fellow

IFMA members

We kicked off the New Year with a tour of Sonosite's facility in Bothell on January 24th. I hope everyone enjoyed the tour and the view into what's happening in the amazing world of hand-held ultrasound equipment.

I'll be off to the 2006 IFMA Leadership Conference in Houston as this goes to press, so I'll report on that great event next month.

February is a quiet month from programs due to the late January event and the early March event.

The Educational Symposium is coming up on March 2nd at what is arguably the coolest new building in Lynnwood. As usual, your Education Committee has a great program this year with some new wrinkles; a small trade show and a tour of a LEED certified building. Linda Beverly will be visiting from International and Mike Parks from Marple's Business Newsletter will be speaking. We look forward to seeing many of you there.

Hopefully, we'll be seeing a reprieve from the nearly constant (and in some cases, record) precipitation of this long and gray winter (all you giddy skiers excepted...). It's at this time of year, when the extended gray is added to the general human conditions that some must endure along with the string of natural and man-made disasters of recent times, that one can feel so-called 'compassion fatigue'.

If you are feeling this way, remember that what people need most is your time. There are plenty of local groups that can use your help (including this fine organization). I've found that volunteerism is one of the greatest uses of your time and that it can provide a level of satisfaction that your regular "job" may rarely provide.

My grandfather once shared with me an old saw -

"Many hands make light work..." It's never been truer.

Best Regards, Chris Lewis, CFM

10th Annual IFMA Symposium Features Powerful Sessions

Rising energy costs, workforce productivity, and design and operation strategies to improve facility performance are just a few of the timely topics addressed at this year's annual IFMA Education Symposium on March 2, 2006 from 8:00am to 3:00pm at the Lynnwood Convention Center, 3711 196th St. SW in Lynnwood. The Symposium is an annual, one-day continuing education event on trends and issues in facility management.

This year's event features sessions by two of our chapter leaders and innovators, John Benny, Regional Director for Facilities Services for CH2M HILL IDC Facilities Services and Bob Cowan, Manager of Facilities Engineering at Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center.

Benny's session on Making the Business Case for Facilities Projects will address a challenge we all face – winning support for important projects. The real job of today's facility manager is to become a business partner who can add value to the organization. Making a case for your facilities project requires building a winning business case and successfully competing for the already scarce people and financial resources in today's corporate environment. What are the keys to making a winning argument in the boardroom and how can you develop and deliver such a business case? Benny will provide a brief overview of one successful approach and provide the criteria that can be used to develop your own winning business case.

Join Bob Cowan for a fast-paced session on innovative approaches to collaborative design pioneered at the Hutch. Build It in 4 Years – Operate and Maintain it 4 Ever is the session topic. In most organizations, design teams build it and facilities engineers run it – and never the twain shall meet. Not so, at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center. Bob will share examples of how this premier organization broke with tradition to engage a collaborative process between the design team and engineering staff to solve problems before they happen and ensure long term operating excellence.
